1. ABSTRACT ANGLES

Abstract art should have balance, dimension and texture—and it should be fun to create.

This combination of neon plastic lace, steel rings (psst...you'll find these with the macrame supplies) and strips of basswood secured in a frame checks all the boxes.

2. ROOM TO LOOM

A wood frame from the wood crafting aisle acts as a loom for this plastic lace piece. Our advice: Before you start weaving, plan your design on graph paper to determine how many strands you'll need. Tip: Weave the lace with a long crochet hook—it's quicker than weaving by hand.

3. ALL STAR

When it comes to home décor, there's always space for lace. The proof? The tie-dye plastic lace on this metal star. These strands of plastic lace come pre-dyed—so all it takes to recreate this look is some tight wrapping and a few dabs of glue.

4. BETTER LETTER

We gave these paper-mache letters some DIY TLC with plastic lace and acrylic paint. Weave the strands of plastic lace on a separate flat surface, then wrap the finished piece around the letter and secure it in the back with glue.

5. GREAT CRATE

Here's what you'll need to make this basket: a wood canvas (for the bottom), square dowels (cut and mitered to form the top), skinny dowels (for the sides), wood balls (these are the feet) and of course, plenty of plastic lace.

ON THE COVER:

Plastic lace latticework adhered to glass vases, with strips of felt concealing the loose ends of the lace.

We embellished the plain-weave pattern with pompoms and plastic lace tassels.

We secured our dowel rods with a figure-eight wrap.

RAISING THE BAR

DIY wall art in three steps: 1) Paint dowel rods. 2) Tightly wrap plastic lace around dowels, securing with glue. 3) Tie dowels together with twine—this will keep every piece snugly in place from the top to the bottom rung.
